

FREE ARTS CPD for TEACHERS

The McMillan Centre for the Arts in Education

“Great top tips!”

“I’ve learned how to print and how to incorporate art into other sessions too”

In collaboration with IVE we are pleased to offer FREE Arts CPD to teachers in Bradford. Printmaking back by popular demand.

Friday 25th of May 2018

1:00pm—4:00pm

This session will explore a variety of practical printmaking techniques suitable for the primary classroom and identify learning objectives for Art and Design, whilst considering the place of art within a cross-curricular approach in primary schools.

The session is designed to develop your own confidence and skills as well as your practice as a primary school art and design educator. It is suitable for support staff as well as teachers.

Course leaders— Helen Sims and Claire Dean

After working in primary schools for 15 years, Helen Sims became a specialist art and design teacher. She has also worked as a residential artist in a children’s centre and as a development worker for education and arts centres. Helen has worked at Bradford College for 5 years as the Visual Arts tutor on Primary Education Courses.

Claire Dean has had extensive experience of teaching Design and Technology in primary schools, as well as having a Masters in Art and Design education. She works on the design team of an international craft company as well as being a practising crafts person. Claire is the specialist for Design and Technology on the Primary Education courses.
